Livermore schools will oppose it

LIVERMORE — The Livermore Unified School District board may at last join the other Valley agencies in leveling strong objections to developer Harlan Geldermann's new town proposal.

A new set of trustees and a dramatic appearance by Mayor Helen Tirsell may have moved the board off the dime at Tuesday night's public meeting in the Education Center. Trustee Jim Davis made a persistent pitch for retaining the board's old position — insisting that Geldermann provide schools, support facilities and even beginning staff to serve his proposed Northside community of 45,000.

However, other board members were more inclined to take a clear position against "Geldertown" because of the social and environmental problems it could cause.

Tirsell pressed the issue, explaining the Subdivision Map Act does not allow for holding a developer to his promises about schools. Livermore would have no way to enforce any agreement, she said.

Clarence Hoenig, who chaired the district's successful building election campaign two years ago, urged the board to make a broader, stronger statement. Otherwise, he warned, it would appear the board agreed with Geldermann's proposal except for the detail of providing schools.

In the end, trustees agreed to ask their staff to draft a letter to the Board of Supervisors — who are considering Geldermann's plans at meetings tomorrow May 12 and May 26 — objecting to the proposal. They agreed to talk over at their May 10 meeting the fine points they will want in the letter.

The board's reluctance to move came in sharp contrast to the mayor's sense of urgency. "The city council has fought ferociously against it," she declared. "Two councils have been elected on the issue of Newtown. Both cities, LARPD, ABAG and even the county planning staff are against it."

She brought city consultant Bob Williams, an expert in new town planning from the developer's and governmental standpoints, to help convince the five school trustees. Some points they raised:

●According to Williams, a new town is an enormous financial risk requiring backing far beyond Geldermann's means and involving at least an eight - year time lag before the venture begins to break even.

●To be successful, new towns must be between two growing urban communities — such as Irvine (between San Diego and Los Angeles), Williams says.

●Livermore's General Plan provides for slow growth north of town, Tirsell points out. If the entire northside were pre-empted for Geldermann's proposed town, Livermore would be cut off from further city growth because the vineyards t the south, quarries to the west and the Lawrence Livermore Lab complex to the east deter development in those directions.

●Since environmental agencies have limited the ultimate size of Valley population to 200,000 by the end of the century, growth in Livermore, Pleasanton and Dublin would come to a halt if Geldertown were allowed the entire growth margin.

●The City of Livermore is just getting over its fast - growth pains of 10 years ago, said Tirsell. She reminded the board of lack of parks, double sessions in schools and higher taxes for new roads and sewers,

EBMUD's 2nd glowing report card

WALNUT CREEK — The East Bay Municipal Utility District's (EBMUD) water conservation plan is beginning to read like a success story.

For the second consecutive month, since the start of a water rationing plan in February, district customers have been well under the monthly goal set by the district.

During April the average daily use was 132.6 million gallons of water — well under the 151 million gallon daily goal. In March, district customers were also well within the limit.

The first two days of May show signs of being an equally good water - saving month. On each day, the average daily use was 118.4 million gallons , compared to 245.7 million gallons used on the same days in 1976.

The weekend's rain has helped the district somewhat, EBMUD spokesman Dave Vossbrink said.

The rain raised water levels in reservoirs and in the Sierras there were three inches of snow — the district's main source of water.

However, Vossbrink said, "three inches of snow is only three-tenths of an inch of water," and the snow might be absorbed into the ground rather than running off into the district's storage areas.

Hope for assembly recycling bill

LIVERMORE — Optimism for a state assembly recycling funding bill that could bring Livermore's recycling center as much as $25,000 for new equipment and a proposed home pickup plan was expressed yesterday by a Sacramento official.

Paul Meyer, legislative assistant to Assemblyman Bill Lockyer (D — San Leandro) told The Times AB860 would provide $1 million to the state solid waste management board for distribution as grants to both public and non-profit private agencies for start or expansion of recycling centers.

With a maximum of $25,000 for any one project, Meyer said the bill won unanimous approval last week in the Assembly Committee on Resources, Land Use and Energy.

The bill now goes to the Ways and Means Committee, "a powerful committee where members tend to be a little tighter with the buck on most issues."

"We will need all the support we can get," said Meyers, urging letters to entice Governor Edmund G. Brown, Jr., to support the bill.

"The governor's support would be decisive," he said.

City council this week unanimously endorsed the legislation.

"I think it would help us purchase the equipment necessary to meet the 25 per cent solid waste volume reduction goal of the state by 1980," said Councilman Glen Dahlbacka, who represents Livermore on the county's solid waste committee.

The equipment mentioned by Dahlbacka was described in a proposed recycling plan submitted to council April 23 by Lois Hill, director fot the recycling center.

Noting there will probably be more applications to the state solid waste board than grants if the bill becomes law, Meyer said criteria for priorities will include a provision that the plan become self sufficient in a reasonable time. The Livermore plan, outlined by Hill, is designed to be in the black by 1980.

"I'm optimistic and think it is very timely," said Meyer. He noted the energy savings, conservation of water because less water is used to recycle paper rather than produce virgin paper, and creation of new jobs.

"Often there is a battle between development and environment, but we have received across the board support on the bill," he added, listing AFL-CIO support, canning companies, and conservationists.

San Ramon man killed

A Dublin real estate salesman was fatally shotgunned in the back Wednesday morning outside a Danville home.

While investigators said Terry J. Giraudi had not been robbed, they would not discuss the possible motive except to say they believed they knew what that motive was.

Giraudi, 34, of 15 Pecan Court, San Ramon, an employe of Tri Valley Brokers in Dublin, was found ouside a home at 2301 Norris Canyon Road shortly before 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Investigators say he had been dead less than an hour.

Handicapped students

Valley school districts will be expending large amounts of time and money to keep pace with federally - instituted programs to "better serve" handicapped students.

Among elements of the program are plans for individual instruction, integration into regular school activities and parental influence in the placement and reevaluation of handicapped students.

First day out

Livermore's first zoning administrator walked on the job yesterday completing a reorganization of the city's planning department.

The new man, Paul L. Curtis, has been senior planner and zoning administrator for Pasadena the past five years.

He'll handle the day-to-day chores of the planning department under director Howard Nies, freeing Nies for more long-range policy planning.

For details, see page 14.

Homeowners meet

The San Ramon Homeowners Association will convene this evening at 7:30 in the faculty lounge at Walt Disney School.

Fire Chief Philip A. Phillips will speak to SRHA members about his duties with the Valley Community Services District as they pertain to San Ramon.

Board members will be giving committee reports.

Plenty of Indians, but no chief

LIVERMORE — This spring was going to be a time for local Indian children to plant a "Three Sisters garden" of corn, squash and beans, the Indian staples.

It was going to be a time for traveling to a Hupa reservation in northern California; learning native dances; making costumes; delving into new books about Native American culture.

Those were some of the plans Jack Orr had for the new American Indian Center he was coordinating through the Livermore Unified School District.

- The children have learned to dance, and have formed the White Fawn Dance Troupe. Some have even made costumes. But Orr isn't around to see the fruit of his wintertime planning, because he couldn't afford to keep his $8,400 - a - year job.

The 30 - year - old Paiute Indian, who has lectured at many local colleges and is an expert on Indian culture, is reportedly working in a Hayward factory to make more money now. Members of the parent committee who direct the center say they "went to bat for Jack" more than once, begging for a raise for him.

Jack Orr

But Dr. Justin Bardellini, assistant superintendent for instruction and head of the federally funded Indian program, said there was no way to raise Orr higher than others with equivalent credentials and title on the classified salary scale. The only other classified coordinator position is volunteer coordinator, a part - time position held by Kay Honodel.

Bardellini said there was no way to compensate Orr for the specialized education he has in Indian affairs. However, he said he is hoping to be able to offer more salary to Orr's replacement (applications close May 15 and a new coordinator should be working by June). He said

What's in handicapped student program?

The federal - instituted program to "better serve" handicapped children in local school districts will result in a considerable expenditure of time and funds by Valley school districts — for starters.

Under the terms of the Educational Agency Plan for Special Education, Public Law 94-142, federal funds will be used to provide for the development of in - service programs in school districts throughout the country and, in the case of the Murray School District, additional time for diagnostic and resource specialists, clerical help, "search and serve" activities and publicity for the program.

Murray will apply for $695.24 and $2,200, respectively, for the latter two. These funds will be intermingled with funds in all districts in Alameda County for seeking out handicapped youngsters who are not now receiving full public education benefits.

Among the provisions of the new law are:

— Each individual with "exceptional" educational needs is to have an individualized written instructional plan designed for his or her special educational needs. This plan is to be reevaluated on at least a yearly basis by "appropriate" professional personnel and the parents or guardians of the child.

— Programs are to be developed so as to integrate the child into the regular classroom or regular school activities as soon a possible.

— The elimination of labels, particularly with regard to the developmen of individualized program plans, is emphasized. Categorization of pupils is allowed for data collection purposes.

— Significant data collection and program evaluation requirements are placed on the federal, state and local educational agencies — i.e., the Murray School District, Alameda County Schools, and state Department of Education.

— Records must be confidential for each child, with only the parents and "appropriate" professional personnel having access to private individual files.

— Procedures must be established for insuring parental rights for participating in the assessment, placement, and reassessment of their child.

Funds under Public Law 94-142 are allocated to the state through the computation of a percentage of the national average per - pupil expenditure in public elementary or secondary schools, multiplied by the number of handicapped children being served.

The children claimed for funding by a school district cannot exceed 12 per cent of the statewide total number of children ages 5-17.

The percentage of cost on which the funding is based increases as follows; 1977-78, 5 per cent of national average cost; 1978-79, 10 per cent of national average cost; 1979-80, 20 per cent of national average cost; 1980-81, 30 per cent of national average cost, and 1981-82, 40 per cent (maximum).

In the Murray district, 417 students have been identified as being "handicapped." Total budget for 1977-78 in the district for Special Education will be $21,011, or $44.61 per child.

Wally Moreskine, acting assistant superintendent for Murray, said a plan must be in operation by July 1.

The law and its impact as regards the Pleasanton Joint School District was outlined to trustees Wednesday night.

Friction seen as center problem

the six - man school district executive board could decide to raise the salary.

Another problem with offering more than $700 a month, said Bardellini, is the chunk it takes out of the center's small budget of $36,000 (it will go up to $46,000 next year). High "administrative costs" are frowned on by federal funding agencies, he explained.

The rest of the budget is spent on supplies, books, consultant fees, field trips, rent and utilities at the two - room center on North Livermore Avenue.

The center is for the use of American Indian school children of Livermore and their parents and is one of a handful in the Bay Area. Orr ran a center in Antioch before coming to Livermore last fall and has 13 years of experience in various Indian projects.

One parent said there had been some friction between Orr and the school district over job responsibilities but that he had been well liked by parents. "I know nothing about that," Bardellini said of reported conflicts.

When Orr left in February he did not turn in a formal resignation, said the assistant superintendent, so he was officially terminated by the district at a school board meeting last month. At first, Bardellini reported, it was thought the center could get along without a coordinator through the end of the year but eventually the opening was advertised.

Coincidentally, parent committee chairperson Barbara Karr, an American Indian who was also Bardellini's secretary, got a job in Humboldt County and resigned. New chairman is Keith McCallister.

In spite of the changes, some Indian Center programs are continuing, according to Bardellini. Parent Peggy Hawley stops by the center regularly to open mail and answer inquiries.

But the center probably won't be open full - time again before the summer. One active committee member summed up his feelings: "It's a sorry situation."

No coordinator, but some programs continue

Pleasanton residents hit road plan

PLEASANTON — Del Valle Parkway residents decided at a "last chance" meeting last night to hit city council with the issue of safety in order to thwart a planned four-lane thoroughfare in their neighborhood.

If built, the new parkway would connect Stanley Boulevard with Hopyard Road.

The controversy boiled over a four-year period involving the neighborhood's 16 families, city officials and Morrison Homes — political football in the matter.

"It's a sad state of affairs when you get more cooperation from a private enterprise than public officials," said Del Valle's Jan Opdahl. Morrison Homes is ready to construct 65 homes along the parkway.

"We plan to publicly thank them for being cooperative and willing to accept a frontage road for the residences."

If the the new road is built as planned residents will be forced back into traffic from their driveways.

Residents claim that police will not be able to enforce a 25-miles-per-hour speed limit. Their statement is backed by traffic experts sought out by the group.

"We don't want another Foothill Road or Holmes Road that is plagued with traffic accidents and death," said one of the residents.

From a survey conducted at an identical neighborhood in Fremont, Paseo Padre, another Morrison development, residents say the average motorists travel 35 to 40-miles-per-hour.

The group is prepared to present the evidence to city council and take the matter to court if necessary. Members claim that acting city manager Alan Campbell and engineering director Don Sooby are favoring the road because they designed it.

Teachers object to pay variance

PLEASANTON — Representatives of Pleasanton district teachers and classified employes last night repeated their objections to differences in salary increases between themselves and administrators.

Tom Zach, president of the Amador Valley Teachers Association, said "teachers are pretty upset about this new beginning, they wonder about the worth of teachers."

Pleasanton teachers and classified employes recently received 4 per cent salary increases while administration, supervisory and classified confidential employes of the Pleasanton and Amador districts were granted 5 and 5.25 per cent raises.

Wanda Robison, spokeswoman for Chapter 155 of Classified Employes, told trustees the "CSEA's position within the classified bargaining unit was not enhanced by the credibility gap created by granting of higher dollar settlements (to administration)."

The CSEA, Classified School Employes Association, is the dominent statewide body representing non-teaching personnel in the state.

Mrs. Robison claimed "the demoralizing effect on classified employes was profound."

"The rationale of using percentages for comparison of pay was lost when the lowest paid classified employe, Range A, received an increase of 28 cents per hour when advancing from Step 1 to Step 2 of the salary schedule," added Mrs. Robison, a food services technician.

The Pleasanton board will present its response to the teacher unit contract proposal next week.

Robbery suspects plead not guilty

LIVERMORE — A man and woman accused of robbing the El Taco Restaurant in Dublin at knifepoint have pleaded not guilty and face a preliminary hearing May 11.

Sheriff's deputies arrested Donnie Lee Smith, 27, Hayward, and Cynthia Kay Davis, 20, Hayward, shortly after the April 23 incident. They have been accused of taking $600 from a safe they allegedly forced the manager to open. Customers in the store were reportedly forced into a back room.

In other court action:

— Michael Henry Andrea, 18, 3661 N. Vasco Rd., Livermore, one of two men accused of burglarizing Jim McAtee's gas station at 909 Bluebell Dr., in Springtown, changed his plea to guilty and is scheduled for a May 18 sentencing after a probation report is given the court.

Also charged in the case where a $140 adding machine, a $300 police scanner and a $75 tape deck were taken is Charles Andrew Biffle, 19, of 341 James St., Livermore.

— Originally scheduled for a May 6 disposition, the case of William and Edward Dixon, 19 and 23, was moved to June 1 to allow time for motions to suppress a preliminary hearing. The two are charged with a high speed chase that resulted in a collision with a Livermore police car Feb. 13.

— Frank Joseph Curdy, 35, 3466 Foothill Rd., Pleasanton, was scheduled to plea May 20 to misdemeanor drunk driving charges, stemming from a Feb. 26 three car accident in which two people received minor injuries.

— Kevin Bukowatz, 19, 405 Old Orchard Court, Danville, was scheduled for sentencing next Monday on reduced charges of stealing from Albertson's Market in Dublin Jan. 18 and allegedly assaulting a clerk who tried to stop him in the parking lot.

Collins lets press in on hearing

SAN RAMON — "Defendent" Richard Collins, charged with violating federal law after running for the presidency while a post office employe, will hold a press conference Monday to formally announce the date of his upcoming hearing.

The May 12 hearing at the Federal Building in San Francisco will determine whether Collins violated terms of the Hatch Act. A guilty verdict could cost him his job.

Collins said earlier he will have no attorney present, but will base his defense on the theory that President Jimmy Carter is illegally holding office due to his "split" allegiance between the country and the Democratic Party.

"Even George Washington, in his farewell address to the nation in 1796, warned against the danger of political parties being associated with government. He believed they were too self-serving and might break up the nation," Collins has written.

He referred to former President Gerald Ford last year as "public enemy number one" due to his allegedly suspect campaign tactics and refusal to supply Collins with $2 million in federal campaign funds. The former president was invited to attend the May 12 hearing to testify on his own behalf "or suffer the consequences."

After Carter's November victory, Collins demanded that he be removed from office and independent candidate Sen. Eugene McCarthy be appointed interim president because of the political party affilitation issue.

"I contend, there is no possible way that a political party member, candidate or president - elect or whatever, can 'to the best of my ability' carry out the mandate of The Oath of Office," Collins wrote in February.

He openly flaunted his use of government copy machines to photostat his campaign literature for press mailings, hoping federal officials would also charge him with illegal use of government property. A comparison with Ford's use of government planes and personnel in his campaign would be his front line defense, he says.

Collins remains at his mail carrier's job pending the hearing. It will take place May 12 at 10 a.m. at the Federal Building, 450 Golden Gate Ave. in San Francisco.

Sunol docent first woman to direct regional park

Lesher News Bureau

OAKLAND — A young Brentwood woman has been picked to change the Black Diamond Regional Preserve's image from a "wild west, shoot 'em up" park to one emphasizing placid nature studies.

Joanne Dean, 35, a district naturalist for 10 years and presently head of the docent council at Sunol Regional Park, was appointed Tuesday.

When she assumes her new job at the old Welsh Coal mining region between Antioch and Pittsburg June 1, she will become the first woman ever to head a district park.

Dean, a former New Yorker who moved to the Livermore region in 1964, will also get a $1,244 raise in her annual salary with the promotion.

General Manager Richard Trudeau told district board members Tuesday that a character change of the park is necessary.

"To change Black Diamond from the present situation, of considerable public safety and vandalism problems, we must develop its natural history and historical interpretation potential," Trudeau said.

Alternatively, the district could continue operating the park as it has been doing, "but the long-term benefits which could be made available to the public would not be realized," he added.

"Mrs. Dean has assumed most of the interpretive staff's historical expertise burden, has gathered considerable data on Black Diamond and its history, lives conveniently in Brentwood, and possesses the supervisory potential to put the program together," Trudeau said.

Black Diamond, opened to the public last year after all the abandoned mine shafts were sealed, has been a traditional favorite of target shooters and vandals. The latter almost obliterated the old Welsh cemetery before it was fenced off and the access impeded, park officials said.

Booklet key to Contra Costa

Leher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — The public now has the opportunity to begin unraveling the mysteries of Contra Costa County government and all of its intricacies.

A new thirty - nine page booklet includes information ranging from a list of the Contra Costa County officials to the history of the 15 cities contained in the county. There is information on the county budget and where all those tax dollars go.

Rather than dispense the dry statistics ususally found in annual reports, County Administrator Arthur Will decided to produce a booklet which would be more useful to the average citizen.

"Our office and the members of the County Board of Supervisors receive thousands of calls a year from citizens looking for this information," said Will.

Looking to future

School staff awaits raise

LIVERMORE — While Livermore Unified School District teachers are making their pitch for next year's salaries and benefits, the classified (non - teaching) employes are looking forward to receiving this year's raise, just agreed upon.

Under protest, classified employes accepted a 3.59 per cent raise retroactive to last July. A Memo of Agreement also includes 5 per cent step increments and a promise from the school district to pay the increased premiums for their health and dental insurance coverage.

Classified worker Rosanne Jessing told the board the small raise was "hardly adequate" to cover inflation that has been 5 - 8 per cent this year. She also protested the granting of $25,000 life insurance policies to management, supervisory and confidential employes only. She asked that the board appoint separate people to negotiate the teachers' and classified staff's contracts (currently assistant superintendent Dr. Justin Bardellini wears both hats) so negotiations could proceed at the same time.

Negotiations between the California School Employes Association — traditionally the organization representing the district's 400 classified employes — and the school board hit a snag last September when a group of school bus drivers asked to be represented by the Teamsters instead.

A representative of the state Educational Employes Relations Board heard testimony from both sides last fall and predicted a speedy solution. However, the department quickly became entangled in work, the specialist who heard the Livermore case subsequently quit and a decision on the case is not in sight yet.

"We're at the mercy of that swamped consition in Sacramento," Superintendent of Schools Leo Croce told an unhappy group of classified workers at Tuesday's board meeting.

Meanwhile, classified employes have agreed to have their 1977 - 78 proposal before the board by June 1. Teachers, led by Livermore Education Association president Barbara Brunke, made their opening requests Tuesday night. The public will be asked to comment on the proposal at a future school board meeting and the board will present their counter - offer at a following meeting.

Teachers are asking for:

- A cost - of - living raise plus a makeup raise to bring teachers back to par since the 1974 inflationary spiral started;
- A percentage in addition to defray anticipated 1977 - 78 inflation;
- An additional 6 per cent for beginning teachers with master's or doctor's degrees;
- Since retired teachers don't qualify for Medicare, a district - paid health plan for retirees who have worked at least five years for the district.

The full text of the teachers' proposal will be available through the Education Center, 685 Las Positas Blvd.

Student fund gains

LIVERMORE — About 50 students from Granada and Livermore High Schools cheered when they learned they had collected nearly $1,000 from the community Monday night for the Student Education Loan Fund (SELF).

Chris Bystroff of Livermore High received a gift certificate from the Squire for being the boy with highest collections. Penny Wagner, also from LHS, took home a gift certificate to the Jeanery for topping the girls' collections.

Two teams from Livermore and Granada each were given a certificate from Round Table Pizza. One team, led by Natasha Orloff, worked extra hours over the weekend and were rewarded with a certificate from the Pizza Arcade.

The funds collected for SELF are available to local students for interest - free loans to students who require some financial help for college or vocational school expenses. Since its organization in 1963, SELF has loaned a total of more than $40,000 to some 50 Livermore area students.

In award finals

She poses here with school CSF advisor JoAnn Cox. The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Claude Burdick, Robbie has a straight "A" average. She will compete Saturday with other finalists at Ygnacio Valley High School, Concord. The top - ranked boy and girl will receive cash awards of $700 each; other finalists will take home $200. The award is based on scholarship, leadership and service. (Times photo)

Pipeline on bridge

RICHMOND (AP) — Workmen have begun assembling a six-mile, $1.8 million pipeline that will span the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge to bring desperately needed water to Marin County.

Workmen started stringing 41-foot-long sections of 24-inch diameter pipe together in the emergency parking lane on Tuesday and completion is expected by June 1.

UP TO 10 MILLION gallons of water originally slated for Los Angeles will flow through the pipeline and hook directly into the Marin Municipal Water District system.

Mandatory rationing, begun Feb. 1, has slashed the district's water use to 8.5 million gallons a day, but officials say that figure will climb to at least 12 million during the summer.

The Metropolitan Water District in Los Angeles, which relinquished the emergency water supply to Marin, is getting replacement water from the Colorado River.

WITHOUT THE additional water, Marin officials say their reservoirs would run dry in December.

The pipeline is the first outside water source for the Marin district, which until now has obtained all of its water from local reservoirs and wells.

Still undecided is how to pay for the pipeline.

Applicants invited for new opening as Harvest Park assistant principal

Another pending vacancy has developed in the assistant principal ranks of Pleasanton and Amador schools.

The personnel section for Pleasanton schools is now accepting applications for the assistant principal's post at Harvest Park School, an intermediate grades school.

Present assistant principal Robert Tanghe has requested reassignment to a classroom position. Dale Hudson is principal at the school and Bob Wakeling teaching vice principal.

Applications are still being considered for the assistant principal's slot at Dublin High School currently held by Alan Wadsworth. He has also requested reassignment to a classroom position.

A second assistant principal at the school, Dennis Wong, is reportedly considering a position in private business.

The Dublin administration is currently headed by Bob Hagler, principal, with Wong, Wadsworth, and Donald Seaver as assistant principals.

In a corollary action last month, Superintendent Bruce Newlin indicated there would be no rotation of principals in either district for next year.

Last year, the Pleasanton school board approved Newlin's recommendation for rotation of principals between Valley View and Alisal.

Old Home Tour

Bonnie Krichbaum fluffs a pillow on the magnificent bed that has been a part of her family for five generations.

Treasured family bed finds a perfect setting

Like an airy tree house, the master bedroom of the Krichbaum house is all sweetness and light.

The second-story room is made a private refuge from everyday cares by trees which screen its windows while allowing light to filter through. The wide windows, unencumbered by draperies, look out upon an expanse of green lawn and beyond to the hills south and east of Pleasanton.

Polished wood floors and natural woodwork are a quiet contrast to a simple floral wallpaper with white background, off-white coverlet and table throws, white valances. The jewel-toned carpet and blue lamps seem richer beside the clean white.

Although the room is newly-decorated, the antique furniture looks as though it has always belonged there. In fact, the furniture really does "belong" in the most intimate sort of way.

The magnificent master bed is part of the family's history, ordered built by Bonnie Krichbaum's great-great-grandfather as a wedding present to his bride about 1810 in Texas. Bonnie's mother and grandmother were born in the bed now greatly admired by Bonnie's own young daughter.

A massive armoire and marble-top dresser, also in walnut, match the treasured bed. The room is large enough to contain the pieces without making them seem over-size. The family heirlooms have found a perfect setting.

The Krichbaum house, which was open to the public last year as part of the bicentennial tour, is truly a showcase. Built in 1890, it is one of the oldest homes in Pleasanton and one of the best-preserved. A placque at its front door designates it as a Bicentennial Heritage Home.

Its original owner was a prominent banker in Old Pleasanton, Edward Benedict, who made his fortune in Bodie, now a ghost town. Former owners include Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Viera, and Judge and Mrs. William Gale.

The home will again be open to the public as part of the home tour June 5 to benefit the Pleasanton Presbyterian Church. Those who viewed the Krichbaum house last year will be delighted with the newly-decorated second floor — each of the children's bedrooms reflects a different personality with window treatment, wallpaper and antique furniture. The bath, with original tub and vanity, is now complete.

Fred, Bonnie and their three children are very proud of their home, and the nine years they have spent remodeling and refinishing to bring forth its beautiful, old-fashioned charms. Don't miss the tour.

'Old Town Tour' offers public glimpse into past

The public will get a taste of Pleasanton's rich heritage when eight families open their homes Sunday, June 5 to raise funds for the restoration of 99-year-old Presbyterian Church.

The church will be open for viewing while homemade refreshments are served in the garden after Sunday's services. Neighbors within one block of the church will guide visitors through their historic homes for a donation of $5 ($2.50 for senior citizens).

The Presbyterian Church, located on the corner of Neal and First Streets, will be available in the future for weddings and other functions. The congregation is currently building a new church on Mirador Drive.

Readers of The Times will get glimpses of each home on the "Old Town Tour" with weekly photographs and articles. By popular request, four of the Bicentennial Tour homes will be repeated, while five have been added.

Homes to be included on the tour will be: David and Diane Krichbaum's, 4456 First St.; John and Joan Stevens, 4467 Second St.; James and Helen McNutt, 4448 Second St.; Brian and Chris Bourg, 4512 Second St.; David and Barbara Hall, 4636 Second St.; John and Gene Edmands, 4672 Second St.; Beuford and Blanche Hall, 215 Neal St.; Fred and Bonnie Krichbaum, 303 Neal St.

The homes will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. No children under 10 years will be allowed on the tour. Tickets are available at the Presbyterian Church (846-4436), Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce, Plaza Books or Sage Books. Checks may also be sent with a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Sharon Kingsbury, 4828 Woodthrush Rd., Pleasanton, CA 94566 (462-3059).

Set a better table

If you're the menu planner in your family, you've got alot of things to think about before you actually turn out a meal —

like who's on a low calorie diet, whose diet is restricted and how far the food dollar will stretch. You also need to plan meals that give everyone the nutrients they need for energy and health.

Nutrition labeling on the packages and cans you buy makes this process much easier. To give you an explanation on of what you'll find on the label, the Food and Drug Administration has a publication, "Read the Label Set a Better Table." For a free copy, send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 638E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Pryor, Chase host back to back specials

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chevy Chase, the "Saturday Night" graduate, and Richard Pryor, a Grade-A comic, writer and actor, each have one-hour specials coming up on NBC Tonight. Now, for the bad news.

Save for a few inspired moments, neither show hacks it.

The Chase hour, the first of several prime-timers he'll do, displays generally brittle "National Lampoon" satire that might be funny in print but doesn't play too well on the tube.

Pryor's show — NBC says he'll have one every Tuesday next fall opposite ABC's hit "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley" — only sporadically shows off his formidable comedy talent.

The Chase venture, which airs first, starts with the announcement: "Because of the following special program, 'Deep Throat' will not be seen tonight."

Then Chase appears and, after warning the show "may not be suitable for children ... or the elderly," launches proceedings that include:

— An unfunny "Let's Make a Deal" spoof where a contestant deals herself a spinal tap. It's followed by an equally lame bit about an old lady in a long - distance phone commercial.

— A lightweight jest with heavyweights Duane Bobick, Ken Norton and Jimmy Ellis booked to fight each other simultaneously (and provide two plugs for a coming Norton-Bobick dispute for real on NBC).

— A labored "Ask Dr. Chase" medical segment in which youths seek advice. One lad is from "Juan Corona High School," no doubt named after the man convicted of 25 murders in California a few years ago.

— Good takeoffs on "60 Minutes," televised golf, O.J. Simpson's Hertz car commercials and Jack LaLanne's health spa ads (in which LaLanne appears to tout physical fitness for the dead).

To sum up, the Chase hour — which co-stars and barely uses the gifted Tim Conway — tries mightily for adult satire, but usually achieves only junioric humor, one grade above sophomoric.

Pryor's show is the better one and gets off to a nice start when he's accosted by a lady who reminds him the Bible says "thou shalt not deny the Rev. James L. White a primetime guest shot."

It sets the stage for him to appear as the reverend, a gaudy money-grubber. In a gospel-telethon show, he grouses: "We're not getting the crossover bucks ... the white folks' money ... what we're lookin' for is the Billy Graham money."

Other good bits: The Pips singing without Gladys Knight and Pryor as Ugandan president Idi Amin, saying, "I love American people. I want to say I had two for lunch."

Unfortunately, the hour's pace isn't crisp and its writing tends more to messages of black pride and awareness than entertainment.

Well, at least he's trying something different, going for more than the easy laugh. He'll be an interesting contender next fall.

Look for more college football on television

NEW YORK — There will be more college football on television come 1978 and it may be spread over two networks.

The NCAA, gearing up for hard bargaining over its 1978-79 college grid TV package, has polled its members and discovered that, by and large, they are in favor of more games on television, particularly on a regional basis, even if in-stadium attendance must suffer.

More TV games means more network money. It also means exposure for some teams that don't usually get on television. An expanded package would contain the same appearance limitations, which means that schools like Notre Dame still would be seen a maximum of five times over a two-year period. But other schools, not usually seen on the tube, would get a share of the dollars and exposure.

The NCAA TV Committee will poll the membership again shortly to get permission to negotiate an expanded package. Then ABC will get first crack, under terms of the current agreement which runs through this year. If ABC doesn't agree to pick up the whole package, with more games and a higher price tag, then the NCAA can try and peddle part of it, or all of it for that matter, elsewhere.

CBS, NBC and the Hughes Television Network have shown interest, with CBS looking like the best bet to purchase at least part of the package.

Heisman

The Heisman Trophy, college football's version of the Oscar, has succumbed to the siren call of television.

CBS has contracted with the Downtown Athletic Club to televise the Heisman Award dinner Dec. 8. The show will run at least 1½ hours and will be spruced up with the addition of a half dozen other awards. The Heisman winner will be a closely guarded secret and will be announced with suitable pomp and circumstance, presumably in the last five minutes of the show.

Boxing

Televised boxing is supposed to be under a cloud in the wake of ABC's suspension of Don King's troubled U.S. Boxing Championships, but you wouldn't know it to look at this weekend's schedule.

CBS will have Olympic gold medal winners Leon and Michael Spinks and heavyweight John Tate Saturday in a series of fights from St. Louis, while ABC will counter with the U.S. Amateur Boxing Championships from Winston-Salem, N.C.

NBC, meanwhile, is gearing up for its Ken Norton-Duane Bobick prime time presentation next Wednesday night.

ABC also has got the Muhammad Ali - Alfredo Evangelista affair, promoted by Don King, May 16. There had been reports that ABC was considering backing out of the venture because Evangelista's credentials were shaky, but that problem apparently has been resolved.

As long as the ratings stay up there, boxing will continue on the tube, cloud or no cloud.

Playoffs

CBS has been messing around with the NBA playoff schedule. Last Friday night three of the four quarter-final series then under way resumed but the fourth, Portland-Denver, didn't.

NEW YORK: Denver didn't.

How come? Well, it seems that earlier in the week CBS realized that Los Angeles led Golden State 2-1 in their best of-seven series and a pair of Laker victories would wrap it up before Sunday. And if Portland, leading Denver 3-1, should win Friday night, that series also would be over.

That would leave CBS with no doubleheader game Sunday afternoon. Unthinkable. So the Portland-Denver series was held up until Sunday to insure the network of a twin bill.

Does that constitute tampering? Sure does, but when you pay the bills you are entitled to certain liberties.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I can't stop hating my parents for what they did to me during their divorce. Each tried to use me against the other and my life was pure hell. As a result of my disgust over their wrangling I was a homosexual for three years. Now, at 17, I'm in love with a girl, but I don't even want to think of marriage. When I told her this, she misunderstood and left me. I feel that my experiences have made it impossible for me to relate to any one person in my life. Yet I'd like to explain to this girl. — T.Y.

DEAR. T.Y.: You owe it to yourself, as well as the girl, to discuss your fears regarding failure in personal relationships. Your emotions are not uncommon in young people who have suffered the bitterness of parental divorce.

There's no point, however, in blaming your parents for the rest of your life. Try to understand their failings. Remember, they too experienced parental failings with possibly even more traumatic results. Had they understood their own childhood problems, they might have spared you similar mistakes.

Dr. Frank Caprio and other psychiatrists feel we've gone too far in the earlier accepted theory of placing any and all blame for our personality defects at the door of our parents. Perhaps yours made many mistakes and were unknowingly cruel. I say "unknowingly" because I'm sure they were much too concerned with their own problems to want to deliberately hurt you. In effect, you were injured because of their carelessness, insensitivity and lack of understanding.

At 17, you have a chance to break from those patterns that so disturbed your life and theirs. Be happy that you have the opportunity to change. A talk with your girlfriend may bring the sympathy and understanding you so earnestly seek.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: Before we got married, my husband and I could hardly keep our hands off each other. Now I'm lucky if he gets romantic once a week. Since this is the second marriage for both of us — we are 40 and 38 — we want it to work. I don't understand his attitude, and when I ask him what's wrong he answers, "Nothing." It's very confusing, particularly since my first husband was just the opposite — in fact, he was too much for me. — M.K.

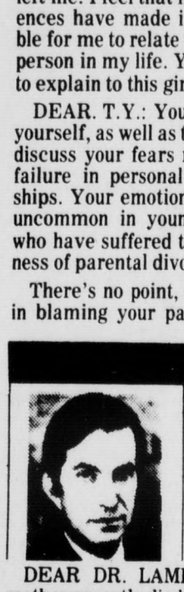
DEAR M.K.: You may not be aware of it, but it appears that you have made the marital bed a proving ground. Quality not quantity is what counts. Though you complain that your first husband was "too much for me," you obviously are unaware that most males regard it as physically impossible to be "oversexed."

Just because your husband is not as demanding sexually as your former spouse does not mean he is losing interest in you. Possibly in some unthinking comments you have drawn comparisons between him and your first husband and thus set up psychological blocks that make your present husband feel he has to live up to some imaginary ideal of sexual performance.

Anxiety and fear over inadequacy may be interfering with his romantic interest. Fear of being a failure, of being thought sexually inferior or of being ridiculed can inhibit the open expression of sexual desire.

Each individual also has a different intensity of sex drive. Comparison with another is unfair. And then, too, you are both older and your memories of your first husband's requirements must be tempered by acknowledgement of the decline in sexual desire that comes with age.

Profligacy is no proof of passion. Love is more lasting.



Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — My mother recently died at age 64 from hypertensive arteriosclerotic cardiovascular disease. Could you please explain this condition?

As far as we know she had no symptoms. Would this disease have taken a long time to develop? What caused it? What could have been done to prevent it?

DEAR READER — It is always a shock to lose a loved one. If it has to happen, a sudden demise during sleep with no symptoms or disability before that is the best way. You have the satisfaction of knowing that your mother was spared prolonged anxiety and pain that might have accompanied a stroke.

Your mother died of a stroke. High blood pressure increases the speed of changes in the arteries. These changes are the fatty-cholesterol deposits that may suddenly obstruct an artery. If the heart is involved it causes a heart attack and if the artery is to the brain it causes a stroke.

I want to emphasize to my other readers that this is one reason why there has been a national campaign to find people with high blood pressure and to treat it. Adequate treatment of high blood pressure helps delay or prevent strokes. Even despite treatment the stroke can still occur.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I was shocked to learn that a baking company is now putting wood cellulose in its bread to increase the fiber content. I had just bought a loaf of the bread before I heard what they were using. I threw the whole loaf in the garbage. I'll be darned if I'll eat wood!

Does wood cellulose have any nutrients? Would prolonged use of such bulk be an irritant to the intestines?

DEAR READER — There are several undigestible fiber sources being used now to make low calorie bread. It won't hurt you. There are lots of undigestible fibers in some of nature's best unadulterated foods.

There are two reasons for doing this. The fiber decreases the calories for those who need to decrease the calorie intake and the fiber may actually help the function of the intestines.

This is really an outgrowth of the observation that cereal fiber found in whole wheat before it is milled and converted to white flour improves bowel function. The colon needs a minimal amount of undigestible fiber to contract and relax normally in performing its function.

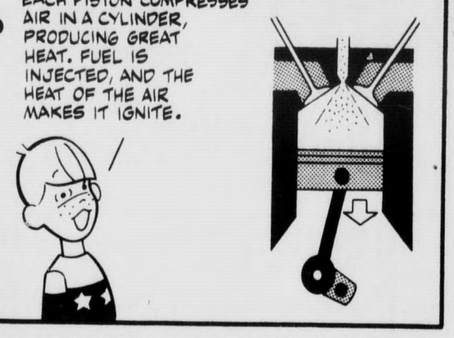
There are no nutrients in any of the fibers that we can use. Our body does not break down cellulose, but some animals are able to do this. Cellulose is really a form of carbohydrate and animals who can break it down use it as carbohydrate, just as we use starch.

Johnny Wonder's QUESTION CORNER

Q. "HOW DOES A DIESEL ENGINE WORK?"

MARY ELLEN REGAN
ALBANY, NY

A. IN A DIESEL ENGINE, EACH PISTON COMPRESSES AIR IN A CYLINDER, PRODUCING GREAT HEAT. FUEL IS INJECTED, AND THE HEAT OF THE AIR MAKES IT IGNITE.



© 1977 by NEA, Inc. T.M. Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. Dick Rogers 5/6

In both the diesel and gasoline engines, power comes from an explosion of air and fuel that has been mixed and squeezed.

But the diesel engine is much simpler. It doesn't need electricity and spark plugs to ignite the fuel.

Inside each cylinder is a piston that pumps up and down (a small starting motor is used to start the pistons moving up and down).

Air is first let into the cylinder. The piston squeezes the air against the top of the cylinder. The tightly compressed air becomes very hot.

At just the right instant, fuel oil is sprayed into the cylinder. The hot air causes the oil to burn explosively, forcing the piston down. At the same time, other pistons are working in the same way.

Their pumplike action turns the crankshaft which turns the wheels of a truck, a bus, or a big locomotive. The diesel engine is named after its inventor, Rudolf Diesel.

Opening lead — 3 ♣

By Oswald & James Jacoby

At every table in the 1976 Olympiad the North-South pair got to three notrump and every declarer but one came home with nine or 10 tricks. The one who went down was more unlucky than unskillful.

Tim Seres of Australia opened the three of clubs. We aren't going to discuss the merit or lack of merit of this choice, but it sure worked.

East's jack lost to South's ace. South led a heart to dummy's jack and elected to lead a spade to try a jack finesse. A diamond lead would have been better, but poor South was really punished.

Seres took his queen of spades and proceeded to lead the 10 of clubs. South let this hold and when Seres continued with the eight spot South decided that Seres had started with queen-10-8-3 and finessed dummy's nine.

East's queen of clubs became the third defensive trick and they still had their two aces to complete the rout.

Campgrounds operating, most packed

Camping over Memorial Day Weekend?

The state Department of Parks and Recreation has issued an update on the camping situation during the drought:

All state parks that are usually open at this time of year are expected to be in operation during Memorial Day Weekend. Normal or near - normal service will be offered by most state parks, beaches and recreation areas.

Many campgrounds are already fully reserved, including most in the southern and central coastal areas plus Sugar Pine Point and Grover Hot Springs State Parks near Lake Tahoe and Brannan Island in the Sacramento - San Joaquin Delta.

Most state park campgrounds are on the statewide computerized reservation system operated by Ticketron, with reservations available as early as 30 days in advance or as late as Saturday for any nights beginning Friday of the following week. However, the campground at Samuel P. Taylor State Park in Marin County and Bodega Dunes at Sonoma Coast State Beach have been taken off the reservation system because of water supply shortages.

Boat launching service is diminished at Folsom Lake and Lake Oroville State Recreation Areas.

At Folsom Lake, east of Sacramento, the only launch ramp remaining in operation at the main lake is a temporary ramp at the marina at Brown's Ravine, where concessionaire Norm Christensen also is providing four docks with 175 slips and other limited services. All permanent boat ramps at Folsom Lake have been above the water line since last Labor Day. Boats can also be launched from the construction road at Beals Point. Other temporary ramps at Folsom Lake are planned for completion in early summer.

Boat launching continues normal at Lake Natoma, the other lake at Folsom Lake State Recreation Area, between Folsom and Nimbus Dams, where the water level remains nearly constant regardless of the level of Folsom Lake.

At Lake Oroville, 70 miles north of Sacramento, the last permanent launch ramp at the Spillway area is now above the water line. A temporary launch ramp installed at Foreman Creek on the east side of the lake has one lane for trailered boats and one for car - top boats. The concessionaire at Bidwell Canyon has installed one ramp with one lane for small boats. All boat - in campsites have been taken off the reservation system because the low lake level makes the sites difficult to reach.

All services remain normal at Thermalito Forebay, below Oroville Dam. The water level there remains nearly constant regardless of the level of Lake Oroville. The 400 - acre North Forebay is for swimming, fishing and nonpowered boats only; the 400 - acre South Forebay takes all kinds of boats.

Water shortages are resulting in inconveniences at a few state park units: At the Bodega Dunes campground, chemical toilets have replaced flush toilets. The only water available, for drinking and cooking, is hauled in by tank truck and dispensed from one central location. Chemical toilets are also now in use at Mt. Diablo State Park in Contra Costa County and at Butano State Park in San Mateo County.

Showers have been shut off at the beach at Seacliff State Beach in Santa Cruz and at Half Moon Bay in San Mateo County. Cold showers only are available at Seacliff and at Morro Bay State Beach in San Luis Obispo County. Showers are limited to certain times of the day at Samuel P. Taylor State Park in Marin County and at Calaveras Big Trees State Park, Calaveras County.

At Sugarloaf Ridge State Park in Sonoma and Napa Counties, the water supply is subject to interrupted service because of a slow recovery rate in the reservoir. Austin Creek State Recreation Area in Sonoma County has no water, but dry camping is allowed.

No state parks have yet been closed because of fire danger. Subject to closure whenever the fire index is too high are Topanga and Malibu State Parks in Los Angeles County, Mt. Diablo, the upper half of Mt. Tamalpais State Park in Marin County and portions of Gaviota State Park (but not the campground) in Santa Barbara County.

State Parks and Recreation Director Herbert Rhodes promises to try to keep the parks open while reducing water use by 45 percent from previous years.

Controls, maybe, on solar heat

Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — Solar heat devices which are causing a slow burn in certain neighborhoods may be coming under county controls.

Supervisor Eric Hasseltine, Danville, asked the County Planning Department to "address itself closely" to residential solar heat collectors.

He said he had complaints from homeowners complaining that certain heat collectors were 35 feet high, unsightly and actually sloping over another neighbor's residence.

Brand Loyalties Shaken By Taste Impact Of Low Tar Merit.

There is a taste alternative to high tar cigarettes.

Modern technology created it.

Tests proved it.

Smokers are confirming it.

Today most MERIT smokers are coming from high tar cigarettes—many from brands they had been loyal to for years.

Yet they're switching to—and sticking with—MERIT.

The reason is a real advance in tobacco technology that resulted in a way to boost natural tobacco flavor without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

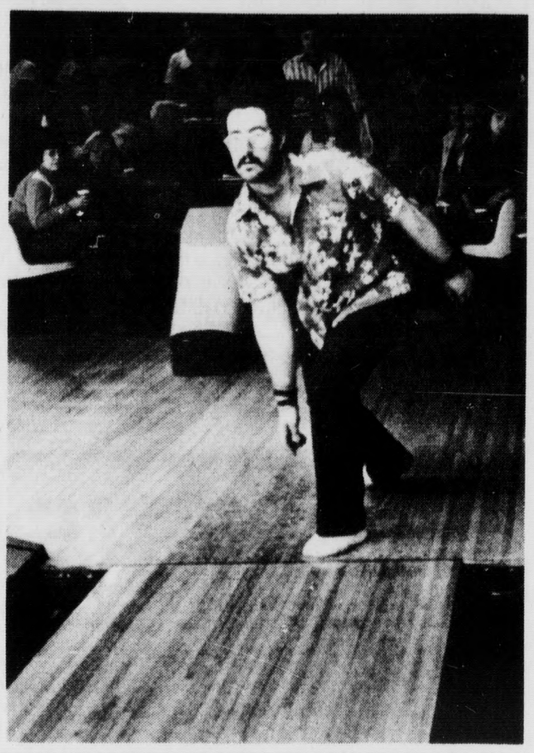
A record falls in Dublin

65, 532 pins on the floor



Tom Destowet bowls the clincher in front of family, friends and fans. . .

Tom Destowet was half - dragged from the Amador Lanes in Dublin early yesterday morning.

His feet were bound and his right hand was swollen and bleeding.

No, this is not another kidnap story. Destowet's six-day ordeal was self-imposed.

At 11 p.m. Tuesday night, Destowet broke the Guinness World Book of Records record for marathon bowling. He had been a resident of the bowling alley since noon, Thursday, April 28. He finally called it a game at 1:10 am yesterday. The previous record was held by Thomas Mogavero of New York. Set in 1975, he bowled for 30 hours and 50 minutes.

Destowet bowled for 133 hours and ten minutes. In 576 games, he tallied 516 strikes, 1660 spares, and picked up 26 splits. He averaged 114 with a game high of 200. The total of pins snared was 65,532.

Destowet probably would have kept on going if not for his father. He had worked himself into a tracelike state by Tuesday. When the janitor came to sweep the lane, Destowet seemingly unaware of the obstacle, rolled the ball straight towards the startled man, who lept out of the way.

"For that last couple of hours, I just concentrated on making one more strike. That kept me really pumped up," he explained energetically.

Desotwet's father repeatedly called to him that he had done it, but the 'Marathon Man' as his league friends call him, just kept on rolling balls.

When he finally got the message, he spiked the ball down the lane in Clarence Davis fashion.

Desotwet's energy did fade on him a couple of times. He admitted that two out of the five evenings he suffered from lack of sleep, and that his feet were bothering him.

"I just got to where I would be rolling just to roll the ball. I got weak at times, but then I would get this second life. I don't know where the strength came from, but I would feel like I could dribble the ball like a basketball," he said.

That's an amazing feat for a man who had almost raw flesh on the bottom of his feet. He had raised blisters by Friday morning, and as his father put it, "We were working like mechanics to hold his feet together."

Destowet's sister Cathy, who is a nurse, administered treatments and massages. Every three hours, he would have his feet packed in ice, rebandaged, and covered with two pairs of heavy socks.

"It really wasn't that much physical torture. My arm feels like it did the first day," he said as he waved it around in demonstration.

What Destowet accomplished was almost the equivalent of beating himself up. Why?

"I did it because I like to succeed. I'm not a quitter. They'd have to carry me out of here before I'd walk out in defeat," he said adamently. He didn't have any doubts about himself either.

"I knew I could do it," he said.

But his quest for breaking world records is not over yet. Destowet, who was a music major at Alameda and Laney Junior Colleges, plans to tackle the record for marathon piano playing. "As soon as the swelling in my hand goes down," he said laughing.

He played soccer in college, but didn't mention any planned attempts for that record, not yet anyway.

After he broke this record though, there began to be considerations about Destowet's finances. After all, 576 games of bowling could put quite a pinch on the pocketbook.

Originally, Destowet had a sponsor who was willing to help out partially. The sponsor, whose name was not disclosed, never came through.

Bob Tetak, General Manager of Amador Lanes, apparently has "a business agreement that we, (he and Destowet), worked out." He said that if Destowet does have to pay anything, it will be minimal. "But I really can't say. He may or may not. It's between us."

When Destowet passed the 131 hour mark, Tetak presented him with a new ball., explaining that, "You almost wore your other one out." Tetak has estimated that Destowet probably threw around 20 tons worth of bowling balls. Destowet, to be official, was required to use a 16 lb. ball.

Tetak announced to the crowd that lanes one and two would be designated as Tom's corner', and that his picture would be on display. He was also given six months of free bowling.

Destowet's blurry - eyed family kept a constant vigile over the 26-year old Oakland resident. They have been averaging 2-3 hours of sleep a night. Two of his most enthusiastic supporters were Frank and Rose Wurzburger, his maternal grandparents.

They inspired him by paying him a dime for each strike or spare. They dropped about $40 Tuesday.

"We want to encourage him to be playing these games. He loves sports," Mrs. Wurzburger said. "You know I'm 75, but I feel so young now because we are so excitted for Tom," she confided with a twinkle in her eyes.

She kept the more youthful onlookers entertained by giving lessons in Hungarian, while her husband told stories about his Austrian homeland.

We want to thank all of these people for coming out and supporting Tom," he added.

Destowet was still showing a degree of coherence and excitement at midnight, as his concern for his game increased.

"I got another strike," he yelled to his family.

"Another day's practice and you should be alright," his father responded.

After Destowet rolled his final frame, he sat down with a glazed look on his face. His sorjourn had ended. He was ready to go home. As his mother and father lifted him into a waiting van, he turned and said, "You know, I think it's catching up with me. I'm just about tired."

Russell will leave Sonics

SEATTLE — Bill Russell, coach and general manager of the Seattle SuperSonics for the past four seasons, will not return to the National Basketball Association team for the fifth and final year of his contract, a team spokesman said Wednesday.

During the past season, in which the Sonics finished 40-42 and failed to make the NBA playoffs for the first time in three years, Russell was "too expensive" in his dual role, said Sam Schulman, the Sonics' president.

Schulman said he preferred that the former Boston Celtics' great continue in one or the other jobs next season, but not both.

Observers predict that Bob Hopkins, presently the Sonics' assistant coach, will succeed Russell.

Schulman reached a settlement with Russell Wednesday on the final year of Russell's $250,000 annual contract with the team, spokesman Rick Welts said.

At the same time, Sonics assistant general manager Bob Walsh announced that he was being fired.

Hopkins completed his third year with the Sonics this past season. Prior to joining the Sonics, he was head basketball coach at Xavier of New Orleans for five years. Before that, he was head coach at Alcorn A&M for three seasons.

The 43-year-old Russell compiled a 162-166 record in four years at Seattle.

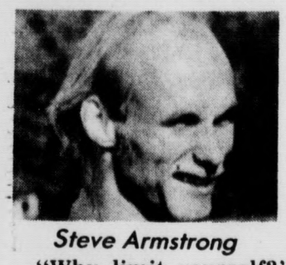
A man for all seasons

On Sports

Randy Knudson smiled, lifted his arm and threw a good natured left hook at his roommate. The blow grazed his right shoulder and suddenly both broke out in laughter.

"He's crazy," cracked the bemused Monte Vista High coach. "There's nothing the guy won't try."

Save walking a high - wire, dodging Nimitz freeway traffic, or climbing Mt. Everest, Steve Armstrong — a man of action — has nearly done it all.



Steve Armstrong

That's not to say he won't try one of the aforementioned. Just give him time.

"I guess you could call me an all - around person," said Armstrong, the bizarre mystery man, whose indulgence for the unusual is often strikingly humorous.

"Why limit yourself?" ponders the first year Monte Vista track coach. "I want to try everything I can before my days are up."

There's strong indication he will.

Already, Armstrong has tried hang - gliding, river rafting, freestyle skiing, soccer, wrestling, ballet, boxing, track, baseball, swimming, mountain climbing, football ... you name it.

"I really enjoy getting involved," understated the coach last week while calling the shots at a dual track meet between the Mustangs and San Ramon. "I like to see myself improve and want to be satisfied in everything I try."

His track experience is limited, but his endurance for the sport certainly is not. Inheriting a team that has done little in the way of winning over the years, Armstrong is out to disprove the theory that Monte Vista can't someday be a contender. With him it will.

He's set up a rigorous training schedule this spring where one false move prompts instant unhappiness for his young charges. Runners not following orders, like not showing up for practices on time, are subject to long climbs up a seemingly endless hill adjacent to Monte Vista's track.

"They learn fast not to miss practices," insisted the coach.

Failing to show also jeopardizes a persons chance of performing in an upcoming meet.

"The kids have really been great this year," the coach enthused. "They'll hold themselves out without even telling. There was this one guy that I figured would be running in a recent meet. On the day of the meet I asked him why he wasn't suited up. He told me he had missed a practice and felt bad. I forget all about it. That kind of thing showed me a lot."

Armstrong never gave himself the chance to prove what he could do in track competition. He had other things on his mind. The 1968 Acalanes graduate tried the pole vault for three days before turning to swimming. He soon bailed out on that and looked ahead to skiing, then came river rafting, hang gliding, ballet, boxing ...

Knudson, who went to high school with Armstrong and now lives with him in Danville, knows the 28 - year - old sports fanatic like a book.

Just mention the name and he starts to chuckle. "Some of the things he does are just incredible," laughs Knudson. "The guy once tried to kill me with a hang glider.

"He came this close to killing me," he said, pinking his thumb and index finger. The guy is crazy sometimes."

Armstrong's tales are endless. On a lark, he tried boxing at Chico State and discovered bloodied noses were painfully bruising after a week. He gave river - rafting a shot and felt like Noah without an Ark. Every year he climbs to the highest reaches of Mt. Shasta with his girl friend, looking for nothing but peace of mind. He even taught ballet in preparation for what he hoped to be a longtime professional career in freestyle skiing. Now he wants to try his hand as a freshmen football coach at Monte Vista.

Did George Plimpton start this way?

"He finally grew up and decided to get a real job," joked Knudson, of his current teaching position.

In 1975 he thought he had all the skill to fulfill a lifelong dream. It seemed so simple at the time. He focused his mind on a long - lasting money - making career in freestyle skiing, but when the anticipated fortunes were reduced to nickles and dimes and his knees began to bother him, Armstrong opted for white collar work instead.

"There's a 100 per cent injury rate in skiing," Armstrong quickly discovered, "and I had to make a decision. I think there's a better future in teaching."

No argument there, Steve.

His next test will be to run the Bay - to - Breakers, the long and winding 7.8 mile road climb throughout San Francisco a week from Sunday. He's never tried it. But judging from past performances Armstrong appears headed toward another safe journey.

"I just want to see how I'll do," he said with an unknowing look. Luck just might come his way. A truck might too. But Armstrong is prepared to hurdle anything standing in his way. You can bet on that.

"I just want to give life all I've got," he assured.

Dons' big effort wins crown

Amador Valley High School head swimming coach Chuck Volonte and assistant Doug Reyes had doped the score of their big meet with San Ramon having the Dons win by 10 points.

The two Don coaches underestimated the strength of their own team.

Amador Valley swept to the East Bay Athletic League championship and an undefeated season by trouncing the Wolves, 98½ to 73½ yesterday in Pleasanton.

To make the Don coaches even happier was the fact the the Amador junior varsity also capped an undefeated season, dunking San Ramon 96-61.

The big key for Amador Valley's varsity win was a fast start which gave the Dons a 42-20 advantage before the diving competition began.

Amador Valley's 200-yard medley relay team of Steve Pratuch, Brian Story, Edmond Carter and Mark Allen swam to a 1:46.3 victory to get the Dons rolling.

After that, Amador Valley went 1-2 in the 200-yard freestyle and 1-2-3 in the 200-yard individual medley.

Danny Knauer won the freestyle in 1:52.0 and teammate Kevin Kurtz finished second, timed in 1:51.8. Bill Burns, Tom Wilson and Matt Parson made up the Don team that swept the individual medley, Bill winning it in 2:08.9.

"Those two events (the freestyle and IM) were the keys for us," admitted a happy Volonte who had just been given the traditional "dunking" by his athletes. "We thought we'd go 1-3 in the individual medley with Burns and Wilson but Pearson came through for us to make it a sweep."

The Wolves threatened to make a meet of it, however, when they swept the diving competition and won the 100-yard butterfly.

But Story, one of the top prep swimmers in Northern California, came back to win the 100-yard freestyle in 51.7 and Allen was second in 52.1.

Brillant sophomore Davitt Cunningham of San Ramon took one of his two individual victories when he captured the 500-yard freestyle in 4:54.5. However, the Dons got good efforts from Knauer and Bruce Yparraquirre who took second and third, respectively.

The Dons cinched the meet when Burns led a 1-2-3 Amador Valley sweep in the 100-yard breaststroke. Burns clocked a fine 1:05.2. Jeff Mooney was second in 1:08.6 and Wilson third in 1:10.2.

Cunningham helped San Ramon take the 400-yard freestyle relay in 3:28.6 but the Dons already had the victory in the bag.

"I'd have to say it was just a super all-around team effort," admitted Volonte. "But those big wins in the freestyle and individual medley got us going."

Amador Valley finished with a 6-0 mark in EBAL action. Livermore, which defeated California Tuesday, was second with a 5-1 mark and San Ramon third with a 4-2 record.

Los Angeles rally ends Warrior dream

INGLEWOOD — The Los Angeles Lakers ended the Golden State Warriors' National Basketball Association season with a resounding 97-84 victory here last night in the seventh game of their playoffs.

The Lakers' ability to go to the foul line was the key to their victory. Los Angeles went to the foul line 22 times in the second half to but seven for the Warriors.

The Warriors experienced the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat in the first half.

When Cazzie Russell canned a jumper from the left corner with six seconds gone in the game it looked like the home-court advantage would again be a certainty.

But Golden State, with Gus Williams and Jamaal Wilkes leading the way, the Warriors ran a 21-6 burst past the ice-cold Lakers.

Although Kareem Abdul Jabbar tallied eight points and grabbed as many rebounds in the quarter, the Warriors' 48-31 edged in shooting percentages was enough to insure an 11-point Golden State lead at the break.

Early in the second period, the Warriors took their biggest early lead when Robert Parish curled around Abdul Jabbar for a slam-dunk that made the NBA's greatest center appear foolish, if only for a fleeting moment.

The shot put the Warriors up 31-18, and when Abdul Jabbar decided that he'd been handled a trifle too roughly by a passing Warrior, Golden State's lead grew slightly.

Kareem, in a rare fit of pique, threw his protective goggles to the ground and rolled the ball off the court. When the Warriors brought the ball up Abdul Jabbar fouled Parish and Robert made one of his two free throws, enabling the Warriors to take a brief 14-point lead.

Abdul Jabbar, who tied for first-half the first-half scoring lead with Golden State's Wilkes at 16, later fired an elbow at Parish's head but a TV timeout kept the hostilities from getting out of hand.

But from then until the end of the half the Lakers had their way, outscoring the Warriors 30-14 to take the lead with 19 seconds left on an Earl Tatum jumper at the top of the key.

The Lakers will host Portland Sunday in the begining of the Western Conference finals.

McCovey, Barr in form as SF wins

SAN FRANCISCO — Willie McCovey has seen his share of ridiculous shifts to the right side of the infield over the years.

McCovey, who had two hits and figured indirectly in all the Giant runs scored in yesterday's 5-1 win over the Montreal Expos, thinks the scene may soon change.

"By the time we go around the league a couple of times, I think you'll find the shift coming off," big Mac stated, pointing to his opposite field first inning single that scored the first two Giant runs.

Randy Elliott likewise had two RBI's and two singles in only the second home win in 11 tries at Candlestick for the Giants, who benefited from the six-hit pitching of Jim Barr in one of his finest outings of the season.

Barr scattered six hits and pitched his second complete game of the season to outmatch opponent Gerald Hannahs, a hard-throwing southpaw. It was only the second time this year out of nine attempts the Giants have defeated a portsider.

"I've got better control and velocity today," stated Barr. "My strikes were hitting the black part of the plate. Some of the hitters couldn't believe they were strikes."

Expo manager Dick William, stuffing his familier face with a hot dog, got all he expected out of Hannahs. "He settled down and

Little League round-up

Shepard's two home runs in vain

Two home runs by Dave Shepard went mostly for naught as his Hutka Storage squad was tied by Autohaus Automotive, 10-10 in Livermore American League play.

Hutka scored five times in the fifth inning to take a 10-3 lead but Autohaus came storming back with seven tallies in its half of the fifth to knot the score and force the game to be ended du to time limitation. Chris Solarz scored the tying run for Autohaus.

Erwin Panusch tossed a three hitter and contributed a triple of his own as Eagles defeated "J" Sports 10-1.

Panusch was supported by Greg Mitchell and Daron Hester, each of whom had two hits and Mike Tennyson and Tony Trucks, collectors of one hit apiece.

The three "J" Sports tallies came off the bats of George Lucido, Al Fontes, and Robbie Dalrymple.

A no-hitter by Harold Harmon highlighted the 4-0 Burton's win over Sambo's. Harmon fanned 11 opposing hitters in recording the pitching feat and was backed up by fine hitting and a defense which committed just one error.

Buranis Construction edged Olsens Automotive 8-7 in Farm Division play.

Each team had 11 hits.

Paul King, Tony Montez, and Luke Emmert each had two hits for the winners. King and Montez garnered two RBI's apiece.

Steven Gerick led the losers with two hits. Christopher Dolan and Kirk Hadley each added one hit.

Scott Mayo was the winning pitcher.

Granada

In Farm action the A's belted the Indians, 12-7 and the Pirates smashed the Mets, 11-5.

It was the A's fourth win against no losses.

John Hanson and Steven Paich each had two hits for the Indians. Hanson added two RBI's.

Darrell Beach had two hits and three RBI's for the Pirates. Rick Novotny and Mike Nickman each added a hit. Novotny added two RBI's and Mike Nickman one.

Steve Bowen had a hit and an RBI for the losers.

Vike batters, blow Laney away, 11-6

The skies cleared just in time for Diablo Valley College to drop a cloud over Laney, as the Vikes registered their 15th win of the season with a 11-6 triumph in Oakland.

After four errors in the first inning staked Laney to a 3-0 lead, Vike hurler Bob Flynn breezed along through seven innings before giving reliever Eric Snider a chance to loosen up.

The Vike bats exploded for 14 hits along the way, with a two-run rally in the fourth, five in the fifth, and a few more later on to put it away.

The Vikes improved to 15-7 with the win while Laney dropped to 6-16.

The Vikes' big fifth-inning outburst began with a single to left by Eric Snider, who was 4-for-5 on the day. He was sacrificed to second by Cliff Wherry, and then had to hold on at third after waiting for a Jim Flores shot to fall for a double.

John Raeside walked to load the bases, and Gerald Price moved everyone up one base with an RBI single to left. Mike Donnelly then delivered a two-run single down the line in left, and he and Price scored on a bloop single to right by Willie McGee.

In the fourth inning, the Vikes' first two runs scored on just one hit. Raeside doubled, moved to third on a wild pitch, and waited while Gerald Price and Mike Donnelly walked to load the bases.

A sacrifice fly by Jim Saunders scored Raeside, and Price scored on an errant pickoff attempt at second.

Raeside and Donnelly each had two hits in the game. Flynn yielded five runs, all unearned, on just five hits.

Edwards critical of U.S. sports scene

Thousands of usually placid citizens crowded into sports arenas across the country this year and became frenzied mobs rooting for their teams.

Muhammud Ali has been hearalded as an American deity.

75 million people watched the Super Bowl this January.

Dr. Harry Edwards, a sociology professor at UC Berkeley, contends that this type of infatuation with athletics is perverse.

"American sport is sick. It is something that is not conducive to the well-being and the health of the overall society," Edwards said. "The emphasis is on individual achievement. It is self-defeating

Edwards pioneered the sociology of sports almost ten years ago. He gained noteriety by organizing the boycott by black athletes at the summer Olympics in Mexico in 1968.

Edwards believes that money generates money and that violence breeds violence. That violence, he said, is what the fans pay to see.

Edwards went to China to study their perspective on athletics. Compared to the U.S., he said he found it stimulating.

"When the Chinese see American boxing, they ask, 'why not use a hammer?' They can't understand the violence. They use athletics as a means of serving the people," he noted.

Edwards called sport, "tactical warfare," and said that sport in all societies, "reflects the ideology of that social system."

"Sport is a struggle that everyone can identify with. It is celebrating human potential," he explained.

The Russians and the Americans are like titans according to Edwards. Because of this type of rivalry, he predicted the collapse of the Olympic games. He foresees the 1980 games as the death knell.

"The reason is the same as why the first Olympic era collapsed. Its values have been outlived. It just serves someone else's interests," he said

Edwards pointed out the parallel and the paradox between the U.S. and Russia.

"Even though the countries are equal, there is a unique political indentification. There is a great amount of projection involved. Who wins in secondary. The athletes are reflecting their ideology wherever they come from," he stated.

Edwards, who attended Cornell University and completed his graduate studies at San Jose State, earned a reputation not only as a scholar, but as an athlete as well. He attributes his academic opportunities to the fact that he is big, (6' 8"), and could play decent basketball. He doesn't like the consideration that was given to his ability over his academic prowness.

"Athletics is what did it. White have many alternatives in higher educati Blacks have none. They become athletes," he said.

"They are trapped if they're not good enough. There are only 2000 professional athletes in the country. Athletics is bulls--- as far as the black athlete is concerned," he snapped.

Edwards didn't predict any changes in the framework of sports in the U.S. He believes that blacks are stuck with their role for the present.

"There's probably a white Kareem Abdul-Jabbar somewhere, but he's not aware of it," Edwards added.

Edwards claimed that the reason for this resistance to change is that people's values are being threatened.

"I've really touched a raw nerve. The reality is that sport is the whole society."

He charged that the U.S. is a nation of, "20th century gladiators." — by Elizabeth Scoyen pitched a good game," remarked the skipper. "Heck, he only gave up two runs that were earned. We didn't hit."

The only time the Expos did hit was in the second inning, when a two-out walk to Larry Parrish preceeded a ground-rule double by Dale Unser. Weak-hitting Barry Foote then rapped a solid single to right to score Parrish. Unser, in an attempt to score the second run was nailed at the plate on a fine throw by right fielder Jack Clark.

The Giants had earlier scored in their half of the first on singles by Larry Herndon, Derrel Thomas, Bill Madlock and McCovey, to make it 2-0.

The next time McCovey came up the shift was off after the Expos were burned by his hit to left in the first. With Clark at first via an error, McCovey and Elliott smashed back-to-back singles to go ahead 3-1.

"So far this year, I'm hitting to left field a lot," explained McCovey. "Once I concentrate on the pitcher, I really forget how they're playing me. Once the shift comes off, maybe I'll get a few hits up the middle, which, for me, aren't usually hits."

The Giants finished off the scoring of relievers Dan Warthen and Joe Kerrigan. McCovey led off with a walk, pinch-runner Johnny LeMaster reached second on a passed ball, Elliott stroked another RBI single, and Barr himself sliced a base hit that scored Elliott, who had since advanced on infield ground outs.

The Giants and Expos conclude their three-game series today at 1:05 p.m. today. Ed Halicki (2-2) will hurl for the Giants against Montreal's Steve Rodgers (1-1). Attendance at yesterday's game was 2,213.

A's drubbed, 9-2

BALTIMORE — Lee May cracked a grand slam homerun during a five-run Baltimore first inning, helping the Orioles coast to a 9-2 victory over the Oakland A's Wednesday night behind Jim Palmer's seven-hitter.

May's eighth career grand slam came after the Orioles loaded the bases on Al Bumbry's double and a pair of walks off Dock Ellis, 1-3.

Palmer ran his record to 4-1 while hurling his fifth complete game in six starts.

New Oakland Diocese Bishop is Livermore resident's kin

The Vatican has announced that Bishop John S. Cummins has been appointed the new bishop of the Diocese of Oakland. He returns to his hometown after serving as auxiliary bishop of Sacramento since 1974.

Bishop Cummins is the brother of Mrs. Mary McCarthy of Livermore.

He succeeds Bishop Floyd L. Begin, who died last week. He is presently in Chicago attending the United States Catholic Conference, the national meeting of bishops.

Prior to 1974, Bishop Cummins was executive director of the California Catholic Conference in Sacramento which serves as a liaison between California bishops and the legislature.

He also served as the first chancellor of the newly created diocese of Oakland from 1962-71.

When Bishop Cummins was released from the Oakland Diocese to head the California Catholic Conference, the late Bishop Begin said, "I will have to ordain about 15 men to take your place."

After his appointment as the new bishop of the Diocese of Oakland, Bishop Cummins said, "My thoughts are very much of Bishop Floyd Begin. I join the continuing prayers of all the people of Oakland for this heartful man who served the diocese for 15 years and the Church to a golden jubilee."

"At the same time I express deep gratitude to Bishop Alden Bell," he said. "And to the priests and people of Sacramento for years of welcome and warmth and for memories that will be a continuing source of gratfication."

After his ordination on January 24, 1953, in San Francisco, Bishop Cummins served as associate pastor of Mission Dolores, San Francisco, and was on the faculty of Bishop O'Dowd High School, Oakland, prior to being named chancellor of the Oakland Diocese.

Bishop John S. Cummins

The 49-year old bishop is the son of Michael and the late Mary Cummins of Berkeley. The late Rev. Msgr. Bernard Cummins, his brother, served as superintendent of the schools of the Archdiocese of San Francisco until his death in 1974.

Bishop Cummins attended Berkeley schools, St. Patrick's College and Seminary, Menlo Park, and studied history at Catholic University, Washington, D.C., and the University of California, Berkeley.

"I am conscious, as I accept the invitation of Pope Paul, of the legacy of the diocese and of Bishop Begin," he said. "The anticipation of serious responsiblility is lightened, and indeed gladdened by the awareness of old friendships and generous traditions. May we continue as the Church of Oakland to bring the Lord's light and hope, his love and concern to one another and to many."

City's first zoning chief to guard, control building

LIVERMORE — Revamping of the city's planning department was completed this week with the addition of Livermore's first zoning administrator, Paul L. Curtis.

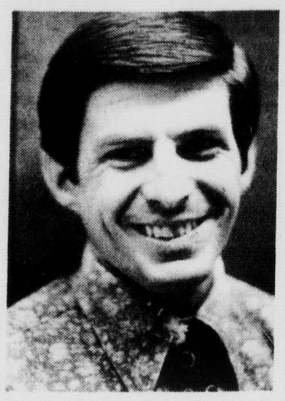
Curtis, 32, who spent the last five years as senior planner and zoning administrator for Pasadena, started his new job Monday at a salary of $1,685 a month.

Creation of the new position was made to permit a greater degree of personnel specialization.

"Paul will handle a lot of the day to day things," said new Planning Director Howard Nies, who said the new zoning administrator will be in charge of administering zoning, environmental, and subdivision ordinances and procedures.

"This leaves me free to deal with the long range problems and policies," said Nies.

Although the first week of any new job is usually heavily filled with orientation, Curtis has already started working with some tentative parcel maps and a conditional use permit for a Springtown gas station which wants storage facilities for U-Haul trailers. He has been given the task of outlining the conditions necessary for the C.U.P.



Paul L. Curtis

Comparing Livermore and Pasadena, Curtis said there is an "entirely different structure. Pasadena, with 108,000 people is twice Livermore's size."

"There is very little open space in Pasadena," Curtis told The Times. "Dealing with neighborhoods there will be like dealing with major sections of Livermore."

"The same problems exist, just on a different scale," he said.

A native of West Virginia, Curtis has lived in California since the age of 15. He is moving into a Livermore home with his wife Elisabeth and their 20 month old son Christopher.

Curtis has a B.S. degree in urban planning from Cal Poly at Pomona.

Raymond to visit Murray unit meet

The Murray school board's response to the Murray Teachers Association contract proposal and handling of graduation programs will be reviewed by the Parent - Administrative Council Thursday, May 19 at Nielsen School in Dublin.

Murray PAC convenes at 8 p.m.

Supervisor Valerie Raymond will be present for the meeting, according to the district. Also to be discussed are the district's special services, and the search for a new superintendent.

The meeting was originally set for May 12 but a community - wide gathering is slated that evening to meet with one of the finalists for the superintendent's position.

Council, planners reach accord on most home occupation rules

LIVERMORE — The planning commission has agreed with most philosophical points brought out recently by the city council when it discussed home occupation regulation.

The regulations have been recently revamped to cut down the amount of paper work required by the planning department, decrease the number of public hearings required and the number of home occupation permits to be handled by the planning commission.

"This will delegate more home occupation approvls to the new zoning administrator," said Planning Director Howard Nies.

Nies said the commission disagreed with two of seven suggestions made by council.

One would have included the philosophy that the purpose of the regulations is for protection of the overhead-paying businesses "so that people with home occupations do not unfairly compete with the businesses paying overhead."

"The planning commission did not feel that was appropriate for the home occupation policy," said Nies, noting the planners did support the philosophy of protecting residential neighborhoods and the character of the neighborhoods.

The other disagreement came with a suggestion that home occupations located in industrial and commercial areas will have less restrictive policies regarding the parking of vehicles but must follow other conditions imposed on home occupations.

Noting that a recent request for two tow trucks to be allowed parking at the owner's home located in a commercial area, Nies said the planners felt "this wasn't really a home occupation, since more than just the people living there were involved in the business."

Planners also agreed to allow home occupation permits for a business otherwise provided in the community; to allow the permits when a hardship exists; permit non-disruptive secondary uses of the dwelling site, including effects on employment in the commercial areas of town; recognized that part-time home businesses often become full-time businesses that move into commercial areas.

In other business, the commission:

— Planned a joint public hearing with the heritage preservation commission May 17 for proposed rezoning of the Trevarno Road area into the city's first heritage preservation zone.

— Recommended approval for Dr. Martin H. Plone's proposed veterinary hospital at 1172 Murrieta Blvd.

— Continued to June 7 any further consideration of a request by dentist Jack A. Owens to rezone his property between 2785 and 2875 East Avenue from low density residential to professional office.

Dr. Owens plans to expand his existing offices, but planners want to review the office category of the city's general plan first.

— Continued discussion of a request by James K. Earhart for a conditional use permit to allow operation of a hauling equipment rental business in conjunction with his Texaco gas station at 930 Springtown Blvd.

To hold county tax rate

Supervisors look for needed cuts

Alameda County Bureau

OAKLAND — County supervisors will have to wrestle with more than $5 million worth of sticky decisions when they face the recommended $440.6 million budget in the coming weeks.

At issue are $4.02 million in "policy" decisions already contained in the record budget, and another $1.333 million in programs that may yet be added to it.

Each million dollars means about 2½ cents on the basic $3.11 per $100 of assessed value county tax rate.

Clipping all $4 million from the budgeted programs could mean lowering the rate 10-cents. Keeping them and adding the $1.3 million in programs means about a 3-cent hike.

But each penny on the tax rate translates to $1.33 in the pocket book of the owner of a $60,000 home.

The county's "overmatch" in alcohol, drug abuse and mental health programs totals more than half the $4 million in debatable items already in the budget.

In addition to the state and federally required levels of spending, the county pumps nearly $290,000 into alcoholism, $351,000 into drug abuse, and a whopping $1.6 million above the call into mental health.

The two-year-old "Office of Program Evaluation," a minor, one-man function a little more than two years ago that exploded to a full fledged department, may have to fight for its $335,376 in next year's budget.

The department "conducts formal evaluations of all county programs . . . to determine their efficiency in providing services and their effectiveness in meeting needs and resolving problems and issues," according to the budget message.

This year, 15 "management specialists" and functionaries were budgeted at $413,821. Next year's budget is slashed 19 per cent, and the crew cut to 12.63.

(Three "management specialists" have been cut and 1,235 hours of clerk time added to reduce personnel by 2.37 workers).

To date, the alcohol, drug, information and referral services and options on hospital care have been evaluated.

Pending projects include probation, welfare, the information system, automated hospital system, and a follow-up to the alcohol study.

But these programs already are included in the recommended budget.

Departments throughout the county have asked for money to fund projects not included in their normal operating costs.

The district attorney's office wants $198,746 to beef up the consumer fraud department.

The department of weights and measures wants another $86,000 to process consumer complaints which do not come under the district attorney's jurisdiction.

County administrator Loren Enoch is leaving it up to the board because "the county is already spending $2,256,656 per year for consumer protection."

The probation department wants $167,435 for a separate jail to hold juveniles being tried as adults, and another $21,972 for a recreation coordinator in juvenile hall.

Probation officers are handling more cases now, but a 25 per cent boost in the number awaiting trial who are released on the own recognizance or shifted to the drug placement program means the department wants another $105,217 for follow-up work.

Gaining support

Holmes campaign snowballs

Yet, even while they stopped people at local shopping centers to sign the document which will go to city council Monday, cars, trucks and motorcycles still whizzed by the Holmes Street crosswalk where the fatality occurred.

Council this week authorized immediate purchase of a radar gun for increased enforcement and told staff to proceed with the necessary studies to approach the California Transportation Department for the light on the Livermore street which is a state highway.

Many people — even those laden with several grocery bundles — stopped to sign the petitions.

"We've had many comments as they signed and donated money," said Susan Aros, a petitioner. "A lot of older people even complained they can't get across that street."

"I wish we had a light instead of that dumb, silly fountain downtown," Aros quoted one man. She called for "more traffic lights and less mini parks."

"If we want beautification, why not just paint some pretty crosswalks for safety," she said. "I'm sure there isn't a parent in this town that wouldn't consider a carefully painted crosswalk a thing of beauty."

Some mothers with tiny tots exclaimed they wanted a crossing light at that intersection before their children were old enough for school when they would have to use the crosswalk there.

Aros, who was stationed at the Safeway market at First and P streets most of the afternoon, said more than half of the 1,010 signatures were collected that day.

"But, they aren't enough," she told The Times. "We want all we can get. The more we get the more clout we will have."

She said $186 had been deposited at noon in a special fund at Lloyd's Bank for the city's share of a stop light, and another $65 had been collected by 4 p.m. Estimated cost of a light can go as high as $80,000, according to city officials.

When Kathie Newton, 969 Dublin Ave., signed at the Granada Shopping Center, she told petitioner Georgia Van Dohre of the times she babysat for Tony's friend Matt Dahlbacka (son of the councilman).

"I used to have to chase Matt and Tony all over the place," she said, placing her name on the long list.

Traveling between various petition locations, this reporter clocked one vehicle approaching the crosswalk at 45 miles per hour. When the driver stopped later, he was asked if he knew how fast he was traveling.

When he learned of his speed, he was silent for a moment, then said, "I normally go 5 miles per hour over the speed limit along Holmes and wasn't aware until I passed the spot. Now I feel bad knowing a child was killed there."

While reporters talked with crosswalk guard Mary Truss — "Nana" — traffic continued to speed along the street. At times Truss expressed fear of going into the street because people have ignored her whistle, arm waving and large hand - held stop sign in the past.

Tony was struck 15 minutes after Nana went off duty the day of the accident.

Petitions will be ciruclated through the weekend. Additional petitioners have been requested to call Joy Rhody at 447-6054.

"If the petitions don't work," said Aros, "we plan to take it up to Governor Brown in person.

She agreed with a Times ediorial urging the city to revive its attack on the state for funding to redirect Highway 84 traffic along extension of Isabel Avenue to a proposed intersection on I-580.

Tirsell detailed old complaints

all because of a population which jumped from 4,000 in 1950 to 50,000 in 1975.

- Established churches, schools, clubs, Scouts and other organizations help newcomers feel part of the local society and cut down on crime. None of these socializing influences will be available in a brand - new community with a population composed totally of newcomers, Tirsell warned.
- The new town would be served by county fire, police, planners, libraries and public works department — and the sudden expansion of services would show up as a sudden expansion of everyone's county taxes, the mayor predicted.
- Where the Livermore and Pleasanton city councils hear citizen opinions every week, the county Board of Supervisors would be in charge of the new town and could be expected to be much less responsive to their requests than elected councils are to their citizenry, said Tirsell.
- Williams finds new towns, including Reston, Va., where he lived, "elitist and dull." There are few rent subsidies and no low - cost or even moderate - priced housing, he said.
- Although the developer's plan includes industry and shopping, there are no guarantees that Northside residents won't have to continue trekking to downtown Livermore or out the freeway to another work.

Support for volunteers, still no dollars

DUBLIN — The Valley Volunteer Bureau (VVB) will have to wait at least two weeks before learning if their request for $3000 from the Valley Community Services District (VCSD) will be honored.

VCSD directors decided Tuesday night to postpone making any decision about the request until their legal counsel can research the issue. There was some doubt about the legal feasibility of making the donation.

The directors said it would take about two weeks to get the report.

VVB acts as a clearing house for matching volunteers with community needs on a non-profit basis, according to Betty Stallings. She is Executive Director of VVB.

Stallings indicated VVB had become dependent on local sources of funding such as VCSD might provide. The $3000 is to go toward the VVB projected annual budget of $12,000, she said.

VCSD President, Chuck Ladner asked Stallings why VVB had broken its ties as a branch of the Alameda County Volunteer Bureau. He pointed out that under the Alameda County General Revenue Sharing Act, a proposed $46,476 had been slated for Social Services. He said VVB would have qualified for some of those funds.

Stallings explained such monies go into a larger corporate pot and were doled out according to priority. She said VVB was eighth on the list.

"There was no future at all for us from that funding source," she said. "If we had stayed with them we would have been cut off from other funding sources. You might say we left the Alameda County Volunteer Bureau for economic reasons."

VCSD directors suggested an alternate plan if legal counsel advised them against making the donation. The agreed to give VVB a resolution of support.

VCSD director Richard Fahey said he was sympathetic to the VVB cause.

"But I must point out that VCSD does not have the same source of revenues as cities and we don't have control of our funds," said Fahey. "The county controls our money since we are not incorporated. That fact might enter into the picture."

"I understand that," Stallings said. "But as a servant of this community, I felt I must ask VCSD for the $3000. Furthermore, our bureau may have to decide which communities to serve based on where we get our revenues."

"Perhaps the Alameda County board of supervisors could make the $3000 donation to the bureau on behalf of the Dublin community," said VCSD director, Ann Jolley.

Danville flap

Offending tank lifted out of hole

DANVILLE — A 25-year-old gasoline holding tank bit the dust Tuesday at Don's Texaco Service station after it was suspected of leaking residual gas into a well on adjoining property.

The 6000 gallon tank had not been used for several years, according to a station attendant. It was dug up and hauled away from its site at 499 San Ramon Valley Blvd.

The attendant said no one knew for sure if that particular tank was the true culprit. There are three other newer ones in use.

"But everything points to the old one as the cause of the problem," he said. "It was very rusty."

Ed Symmon of 104 El Dorado in Danville filed the complaint about the leakage.

He said he began finding gasoline instead of water floating in a toilet last Saturday. The substance appears to be slowly seeping into a well Symmon recently had dug in his backyard.

Fire officials were called in to survey the problem. They said the gas has been draining from an abandoned gasoline storage tank next to Symmon's property. Don's Texaco station is next door.

Hank Carstensen, Danville's fire inspector, said his department ran tests on the gasoline level in the well.

According to Symmons, a "sniffer" used to test vapors, showed the air had 80 per cent gas vapors.

Carstensen said Texaco is running tests to determine seepage origin.

According to Carstensen, the abandoned tank was filled with water and capped years ago after it was discovered that residual gasoline might be leaking from the tank.

The fire inspector said abandoning the 6,000 gallon tank is a violation of the district's fire codes.

Although no direct hazard exists to the house and its occupants, Carstensen said there are health and ecological hazards involved.

Symmon built the 17-foot well nearly three months ago at a cost of $3,500.

The leaking gas reportedly has eaten through a plastic casing that reinforces the sides of the well.

Symmons said he was worried about the survival of some 20-year-old trees on his property if their roots came in contact with the gasoline.

Mt. Diablo radio tower proposal prompts angry protest arguments

By JOHN VANLANDINGHAM
Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — A sometimes angry hearing on radio towers on Mt. Diablo's environmentally coveted North Peak ended Wednesday with nothing resolved.

Contra Costa County Planning Commissioners Wednesday voted to delay their decision on an appeal protesting Board of Adjustment approval of the towers, built on North Peak without a county permit. A decision is set for May 17.

Condemnation proceedings are pending against the tower site's owner, Knox LaRue of Stockton, by state officials who want the site as an addition to Mt. Diablo State Park.

But during the nearly 18 months the county has been grappling with LaRue's towers, the state had done little except file the condemnation suit, Contra Costa County Planning Director Anthony Dehaesus charged.

Six months ago the commissioners voted not to decide until the staff drafted a policy controlling radio towers.

That policy will be considered at the commission's May 17 study session. If it is accepted, the commission may vote on the towers appeal.

Commissioner Donald Anderson, resisting appeals of urgency, balked at voting on the towers without first studying the policy.

'After all, that's the thing a planning commission is supposed to do," he said.

Anderson's remarks came toward the end of the hearing, which began Tuesday night and dragged into the early Wednesday morning hours before it closed.

County officials have been grappling with Knox LaRue's radio towers since he applied for retroactive approval for the existing towers and for a proposed new tower for Standard Oil Co.'s use.

Things were calm at the hearing's outset. A proposed compromise was presented, and the staff said it was satisfactory to La Rue. He would keep five towers and tool sheds and get another tower, all under 90 feet, for Standard Oil Co., which wants to relocate from South Peak.

The first angry words came from George Boletoff of Walnut Creek.

"You're going to put up a bunch of iron towers for some jerks to make a buck off of. I don't understand it."

Chairman William Milano protested the accusation that the commission is intent on destroying the mountain.

Boletoff, who by this time was walking out of the room, turned and shouted, "You start with one tower ... it's just the beginning. Always an excuse."

East Bay Parks spokesman Lewis Crutcher attacked the draft policy, first shown to the opposition last Thursday.

"All you have done here is eliminate the height and distance limits," he charged.

Susan Watson, of the Contra Costa Parks Council, which is appealing LaRue's towers application, offered to drop the council's appeal if the commission would require LaRue to use generators to power his towers for another year while the state completes a study of consolidated towers.

The issue of the state and some critical remarks from LaRue's competitor prompted angry remarks from Dehaesus.

His voice rising, he lambasted the state, saying the only thing it appeared to be interested in is condemnation to acquire LaRue's land.

He said the state's study was nowhere near as far along as some persons had represented and that his staff had received no cooperation or information from the state.

"We've been trying to urge the state to move for 12 to 15 months, and if it takes approving this permit to get it moving, okay," he said.

"All this talk about the beautiful mountain. I know it. I have probably hiked there and covered more of it than anyone else here. We want the state to acquire North Peak and get on with it," Dehaesus said, his voice rising.

Commissioner Albert Compaglia made a reference to "cool heads," and Dehaesus loudly answered, "My head is cool. I raise my voice for emphasis and purpose."

DA won't prosecute county jail deputies

Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — The District Attorney's office won't prosecute county branch jail deputies for alleged illegalities exposed last November in an inmate suit challenging the jail's conditions.

Assistant Dist. Atty. Michael Phelan said Wednesday the decision was reached after reviewing the pleadings in that suit filed by 36 unsentenced prisoners the evidence brought out in testimony and researching the law.

Superior Court Judge Richard Calhoun referred the matter to the District Attorney's office for possible prosecution as a misdemeanor last January when he issued his decision on the inmate's suit.

The judge's order showed he was concerned with keeping sentenced and unsentenced prisoners in the same cell and with punishment of the inmates.

Phelan explained that the law prohibits co-mingling of sentenced and unsentenced prisoners, but provides no sanction or punishment for it.

Judge Calhoun's writ of mandate ordered the sheriff's office to keep the prisoners segregated and to cease any further harassment of prisoners by using the loudspeaker or by stomping around in attic crawlways in the Clayton center's dormitories.

As to the punishment or maltreatment of inmates, Phelan said his office could find no evidence to support the charges.

Testimony at the November hearing on the inmates' suit revealed that a deputy used the loudspeaker to read an article featuring masturbation.

The inmates missed two meals during a work stoppage in June because they refused to unload the food and take it into the kitchen. Testimony said that the inmates were striking to protest unwarranted loss of telephone and other priveleges.

And five inmates were handcuffed together at chest level through their cell bars and forced to remain standing that way for 11 hours on another occasion.

Subsequent to Judge Calhoun's order, Sheriff Harry Ramsay replaced the branch jail commander, segregated sentenced from unsentenced prisoners and ordered a ban on any activity that could be considered harassment.

The deputy who read the masturbation article over the loudspeaker was disciplined by being placed on "Phase Four," a probationary class one step short of dismissal, department sources revealed.

Deputy Public Defender Mark Shaffer who represented the inmates in their suit commented on Phelan's announcement, "I expect that the District Attorney made a fair evaluation."

Phelan said the decision was discussed with Judge Calhoun and that he was satisfied.

County board head hits state solons on taxpayers' woes

SACRAMENTO — Alameda County Supervisor Fred Cooper raised hell with State Legislators yesterday, charging state mandated spending programs tacked $1 on last year's county property tax rate.

The "hypocricy" of noncompliance with the legislative finance bill cost Alameda County homeowners $2.6 million last year, and more than $10 million over the past few years.

Cooper took his three-year-old fight to the Senate Revenue and Taxation Committee to push for passage of State Constitutional He wants voters to force the Legislature into compliance with SB 90, the notorious state financing bill of the early 70s.

Under SB 90 provisions, the legislature makes finding a bill will not raise local costs and appropriates no additional funds.

Cooper claims the bills' mandated programs do cost more, and simply push the burden on to the local property tax.

"I think it is time for the legislature to stop the hypocricy of continued violations of SB 90 (while) individual legislators and the Governor claim that rising property taxes are due to a lack of discipline in local government," Cooper said.

If the constitutional amendment does not make the ballot, he wants SB 90 repealed.

Enforcing SB 90 would reduce the property tax rate 30-cents from the $3.11 charged this year, he claimed.

"If the legislature went further and stopped requiring Alameda County to send $26 million a year to Sacramento ($42.8 million in 1977-78), for adult welfare and medi-cal . . . (the county) could reduce its property tax rate by $1' he said.

Cooper says the authors of bills with the SB 90 disclaimer have told him they "had to put in a finding that there would be no cost to local government 'because otherwise the Governor would veto the bill."

The federal government also slapped the county with a $2 million bill to cover unemployment insurance for part-time and temporary workers, Cooper said.

Additionally, court decisions have stretched felony trials in the county from an average two and one-half days to eight days, he said.

But still, "a major part of our problem is with mandates by the California legislature."

Programs allegedly underfunded include mental health, alcohol, drug abuse, home nursing, foster home rates, the public defender's office, agricultural preserves, superior court judges, juvenile camp costs and medi-cal.

The proposed constitutional amendment would provide an "automatic appropriation" if 'state bills raised local costs, according to Cooper.

"Please either provide adequate funding for these mandates by allowing us to enforce adequate funding in court, or take your full share of the responsibility for increases in local property taxes," he concluded.

Valley of the dinosaurs sale

APPLE VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Dinosaurs for sale — cheap.

Actually, Lonnie Coffman is giving away his 36 dinosaurs. But the stucco monsters are roaming 17 acres of prime ranch land, and the spread's for sale at market price.

Coffman's also giving away three years' rent from a three bedroom home on the property in this quiet valley 100 miles east of Los Angeles, and he's throwing in three years of his time to sweeten the deal.

Coffman is trying to make the unusual sale because he doesn't want his beloved giant pets to follow the real dinosaurs — into extinction.

The 63-year-old former nurseryman spent eight of his 15 retirement years lovingly creating his creatures out of stucco, wire and reinforced steel. But now, because he has nearly run out of money, Coffman is afraid his dinosaurs face destruction unless he can assure a permanent home for them.

So he wants someone to buy his property at market price — about $2,000 an acre — and use the land, plus dinosaurs, as a park. He said he will do the maintenance free for three years or more.

Coffman knows most private parties would not be interested in the deal, so he has been trying to interest local governments in his dinosaur park. Currently, he's won the support of a group of schoolchildren in his efforts to convince San Bernardino County officials to adopt the dinosaurs.

"I'm borrowing money from my brother now," he said.

Employers and cancer causes

By NILDA REGO
Lesher News Bureau

CONCORD — Employers better know if they are using any cancer-causing substances in their business or it will end up costing them a lot of money.

Dr. Fred Ottoboni, chief of the state Health Department's Occupational Cancer Control Unit, told industry representatives Wednesday at the county's Ninth Annual Industrial Safety Conference that occupational cancer has been given "new validity."

He said more and more cases under State Workmen's Compensation laws are being found in favor of the worker. "And it's reflected in premiums."

The slow death of cancer with medical bills going over a long period can put compensation costs very high compared to a "quick death," Ottoboni point out.

"If a man working in asbestos comes up with lung cancer, it is going to be hard to disprove he didn't get it because of his job," Ottoboni said.

Ottoboni was in Concord to explain the new state law which requires all employers who use any of 14 regulated cancer-causing substances to register with the state.

Not only does the state have to be notified if a company is using the carcinogen, but workers have to be told and the places of employment where the substances is used have to be posted.

Ottoboni went on to say items containing the carcinogens have to be labeled.

The federal government has a list of 14 carcinogens that must now be registered. It has recently added benzene which is linked to leukemia. California is also adding asbestos and vinyl chloride to the reporting list.

Asbestos, Ottoboni said, affects between 100,000 to 140,000 in this state.

The lung cancer rate for asbestos workers is four times the rate of a normal population.

The state is expected to adopt asbestos regulations next week after a public hearing in San Francisco. Ottoboni estimated that the date for complying with the asbestos regulations would be set for July 1.

Also to be considered by the State Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board in San Francisco will be safety standards for vinyl chloride.

Starting July 1, the law provides for a $500 penalty for failure to report the use of these carcinogens, a $1,000 fine for a serious violation of a safety standard and a $5,000 for repeat violations.

Besides the substances now on the state carcinogen list, Ottoboni's department will continue to set standards for the cancer-causing substances. He said that one substance which may make the reporting list by October is coal tar pitch.

Ottoboni called the California law a pioneering effort which could be a pattern for the rest of the United States. He assured employers that his department did not intend to eliminate the use of carcinogens but to insure their safe use.

He said the one cancer that man has been able to prevent is occupational cancer. Ottoboni said that knowledge on occupational cancers dates back 150 years when it was discovered that English chimney sweeps were susceptible to scrotal cancer.

Next step for young Livermore talent

LIVERMORE — Her snazzy jazz dancing acrobatic style caused judges to give Deena Kendrick a first place junior level trophy in the San Ramon Valley Exchange Club Search for Talent.

Kendrick, 10, is from Livermore. She was one of six finalists chosen in a contest held April 15. This entitles her to participate in the May 14 finals in San Leandro.

During a preliminary contest held February 14, Kendrick was selected as one of the six finalists. Entrants were from San Ramon Valley. These finalists were selected from all levels.

There are three levels. The primary level includes ages 6 to 10; junior, 10 to 15; senior, 15 to 19.

Kendrick won first place in a March 4 competition when one winner was picked from each level.

Earlier this year she won first place for acrobatics in the junior classification of a competition held in Sacramento. It was called the Northern California State Talent Competition. During that same contest, on the following day, she won second place in the Grand Sweepstakes. At that time she was competing against winners in all categories — not just acrobatics.

During her April 15 challenge, she did acrobatic jazz dancing to the tune of "A Fifth of Beethoven." — by Sue Vogelsanger

Supervisors order: trim budget costs

Lesher Nws Bureau

MARTINEZ — Once again, Contra Costa County department heads have been told to cut budget costs — this time by the board of supervisors.

The board Tuesday backed up a set of "no frills" budget guidelines recommended by Arthur Will, county administrator.

Will and the supervisors' finance committee have told department heads that no new programs will be approved unless they are mandated by state or federal governments or a court decision.

"New programs will be considered if revenue received for agreements or grants will offset the additional costs," Will said.

In a memo to department heads, Will said the budget requests are "much higher than anticipated."

Earlier this year Will told the people heading departments that costs must be cut.

Further, the latest orders from Will and the supervisors say that the staff requests of departments will be scrutinized carefully to make certain they are justified.

There will be no new equipment purchases unless a clear case is presented to show the item to be replaced is uneconomical to maintain.

"Every effort should be made to reduce or eliminate programs traditionally carried on by the departments," the report said.
